Statement of Significance	These two simple cottages have been severely altered, though they retain their original form. Their significance is in their historical association with an important and colourful citizen of Ashfield who was mayor at the time of Federation, and in their streetscape value by virtue of traditional modest scale and form.	Condition as observed from street —	<input type="checkbox"/> Intact Minor alteration — <input type="checkbox"/> Sympathetic <input type="checkbox"/> Unsympathetic Major alteration — <input type="checkbox"/> Sympathetic <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Unsympathetic

Historical Notes
The house 'Farleigh' first appears in the Rate Book of Ashfield Council in 1878. John Mills, described in Sands Directories in 1882 as a lime merchant, built the house and lived here from about that year until his death in 1906. He was an alderman from 1886 until he died, and became Mayor in 1900.(1) In 1907 both 'Farleigh' and its neighbour No 12 were bought by Arthur Henry Case, a stationmaster, possibly of Glen Innes. In 1908 they were each valued at £80 unimproved and £450 improved.(2) 'Farleigh' was then occupied by a procession of short-term tenants including Henry McLeod, Harry George, William McCarthy, Frederick Davison, Mrs Marion Dunn, Edward Casey and C D Bensley. The longest tenancy in these early years was that of a new owner, Michael Dowling, who lived there from 1924 until at least 1933.(3) Refer also to the separate Inventory sheet for the group
Physical Description
These two simple Victorian Georgian cottages survive alongside one another in original identical form, though they have been severely altered in their detail. Built of brick, each has a hipped roof of terra cotta tiles, probably originally of slate. In each case a three-bay verandah runs across the facade, between firewalls whose coping is curved, indicating that the verandah roof was originally concave corrugated iron. No 10 now has a metal skillion, while No 12 has a tiled skillion extending over the firewalls. There are recessed arched panels on the inside faces of these end walls. The facade fenestration comprises a centre door flanked by single double-hung windows. No 10 has timber verandah posts with stop-chamfers suggesting that there was once an iron bracket-and-frieze ensemble; it now has only a light fringe, while No 12 has no trace of the original format except the beams. No chimneys remain at No 10 but one survives at No 12; it is finished in stucco with a corniced top. Because it was common to treat chimneys to match facades, this suggests that the fronts of the cottages were originally stuccoed. The front of No 10 has been abraded to expose the brickwork, while the facade of No 12 has been colour-washed and tuckpointed. The cottages are close to the front building line, making their front gardens minimal, but a picket fence now extends across both frontages.
