Dreaming with eyes open

Dream with your eyes open and write a short story about your wildest daydream.

I open my eyes. My first thought was real hot panic, but then I look, I see green everywhere and suddenly just like that I realise, I'm in a jungle! I pinch myself but the pain is real, I close my eyes but it just gets worse when I open them. I want to get out of there but I don't even know how I got here. I hear a rustling in the bushes. I freeze, petrified. Then a beautiful, majestic lioness. I start to run but then I realised it's leg was mangled and bloody. I swallow and approach the magnificent creature. It did not attack it just stayed there, panting in what I now knew as pain. When I arrive it lets me inspect it's leg. It looks horrible! I pull past the look and look closer. I see it' has a tooth embedded in it's leg. I grab hold of it and, with all my strength, pull. The lioness roars but I keep pulling. When it is out the creature stops roaring and limps away. I'm starting to think that it isn't so bad in the jungle.
