Reading is magic and can transport you to amazing and curious places.

Write a short story about a wonderful and magical place.

A wonderful, magical place. When I think of these four specific words, my heart quickens with joy. Reading can take you anywhere, from the coldest part of the world, to the hottest. I could spend hours with my nose in a book and -

Wait, now I'm getting sidetracked. Ok, so back to a wonderful place. Honestly, this is hard, there are a thousand possibilities.

How can I ever pick one?!? I frown as I chew the back of my pencil. I set it down and pick up my favourite book.

It's about a girl who went to Paris with a talking dog named Charlie.

So I turned the page, another page, I sped through the first chapters rapidly fast. When suddenly, everything went BLACK.

I hear myself screaming as wind gusted at my ears.

"Ahhh!!" 'Woosh', I land in a pile of leaves with a small, golden ball next to me. I touch the fur ball as it suddenly springs up.

"Wow what a ride Emily!" the fluffy ball, that now that I see, is a dog.

"Wait, sorry what. Who's Emily - WAIT, were in Paris?"

I say flabber-gasted.

"Ugh, yeah" Charlie says confused. The next part went with some confusion, so I won't repeat, but in a quick, short summary: I told Charlie that I'm not-really Emily. So he quickly decides to help me get me back to the real world so he can get his real Emily back.

Now, with all that confusion I'm surprised he understood!

I think in my head. So I hop on a bike with Charlie on the side. We swerved and sped this way and that. Dashed between houses with lakes, beaches and street shops. My eyes darted around frantically as I desperately looked for something to get me back. After hours of desperate looking, we finally found a portal! It was leaving in 5 seconds I ran towards it but I tripped! '3'seconds, I got up, I leaped. "2!" I ran,

I turned and waved good-bye to Charlie. "1!" I hopped and slid into the portal. While I traveled up, I thought of what fun I had today and this would definitely be one of my favourite days. ☺

Sorry it's a bit long! I'll try keep it shorter next time! ☺

Hope you go

- Best wishes
