

Book an Adventure

Zara was a nine-year-old girl who had a best friend called Serayah. They always went on crazy adventures together, and today their adventure was to find the golden cookie which was really just some home-baked cookies that Zara's mother had made for them.

As they both looked out the window looking for the cookies, to their surprise, they saw a very unusual glow coming from their treehouse. Serayah was scared and was about to call her mother, but luckily, Zara grabbed her hand just in time.

Zara asked, "Do you want to go on an adventure or not?"

Serayah sighed, "Fine." So, they went to their treehouse to investigate. At first, things seemed normal. But then they saw the same glowing they saw earlier, instead of a little glow it lit up the whole room. And at that very moment they saw a portal, but not just a regular portal. One that looked like it led to some sort of galaxy out in the universe!

As usual Zara just jumped in straight away with no care in the world. Serayah didn't want to go in the glowing portal but it didn't really give her a choice because as soon as she got a millimetre away from the portal it just sucked her in like air getting sucked into a balloon. So all thanks to Zara they are now just floating in the middle of nowhere in a different dimension of some sort.

Suddenly, a hippo popped out its head out and to their surprise it could talk! Even more surprising, it could fly! The hippo flew away but it wasn't very fast, so they followed it. It led them to a magical place where there were more talking, flying hippos.

They kindly asked one of the hippos where they were.

"You are in the world where anything is possible.....the world of ZimZoom! Zara and Serayah both gasped. "That sounds familiar," Serayah said. "Now I remember! I left our favorite book in the treehouse. Could it be?" It turned out that the book was called The World of ZimZoom.

The hippo said he wasn't sure what they were on about, but offered to take them to the Queen. "She knows everything," he explained. So, they went to the Queen. Sadly, the Queen said she didn't have that much power. "She said the only way to get that power is to get the Dermese Berry," she explained. Zara and Serayah jinxed and said together, "Easy peasy lemon squeezy!"

The Queen warned them, "It isn't that easy to get. It's on the highest cloud in the dimension." Once they were there, they started brainstorming ideas for how they could get up to the cloud. Serayah said, "We could hire a helicopter." They asked a taxi man where they could hire one, but he shook his head. "In the world of ZimZoom, anything is possible... except for a helicopter."

"Darn it," said Serayah.

It was silent for a solid ten minutes, until Zara shouted, "Aha! We could ask a hippo to fly us up there!" "Great idea, Zara!" said Serayah. And so, they did just that. A friendly hippo flew them up to the cloud, and surprisingly they managed to get up there pretty easily. The berry wasn't very hard to miss. They grabbed it and flew back down toward the Queen's castle.

The Queen took them into a secret room with a small hole the size of the berry. She placed the berry inside, then asked them to put their hands on it. When they did, it gave them a little zap before sending them back to Earth. They looked at each other, in relief.

"That was quite an adventure."