- ② tingling in his body it felt like the boar was leading him somewhere he couldn't control his body nature was dragging him behind the fierce animal he was following it somewhere suddenly it stopped on a tree a weird swirl started to form then Mark was dragged into it splat he landed on a hard marble platform he got up and there was green lush grass surrounding it he got up and walked for miles and miles. Eventually he saw a grey structure in the distance Mark ran up to it and saw what it was it was a huge grey castle with five huge turrets bursting up from the ground they were as sky scrapers. Mark pushed open the gate there were three gates one had a sign the palace the middle one said Magic books and the one on the right said room of the dead Mark felt a shiver when he read the last sign weirdly again nature dragged mark into the path that said room of the dead when he was in he heard weird voices whispering in his that there were a bunch of folders with names on them mark pulled one out that said henry a ghost came out mark screamed for his life he quickly shut the folder marks heart was beating super fast finally he realised that the names on the folders are the dead peoples names the folders were all in alphabetical order he looked for the j section and found joseph but it was the wrong person so he looked at another one but it wasn't marks father either, eventually he found the right joseph mark screamed with joy his father slowly said "expose me to the sunlight i'll do whatever you want me to do" said mark if you can just turn back into a person so mark slit the case and ran outside with it then he opened it again in an instant joseph turned back into a human being they had the longest hug in history then joseph said "let's free all the other people too so they did. Meanwhile back at marks shack his mother was wondering where they were. after they let all the dead people free they ran back out the castle to the portal and back down the mountain to their home when they got there marks mother thought she was dreaming when she saw joseph she pinched herself and she was awake now they had an even bigger hug the end.
