The Chaos Daycare of Colourful Books

BOOM!!! Colours burst out of books, the walls changed and characters ran around with the messy paint. Ohhhh no!!! One book had lost its colour and there were no characters. We needed to take it to a colour doctor to get the book fixed and get its colour and characters back.

When we got to the colour doctor, he gave the book a vaccination. BOOM!!! Yay the book was alive again and the characters ran everywhere. Two were on the shelf and three were on the medicine cupboard. The walls were way more colourful than before.

We took the book home and were amazed by how one vaccination could fix the problem. But then we realised that we left the colours and characters back at the colour doctor. So, we rushed back but then when we got there, the characters were all sleeping on the shelf and snoring as loud as a pig. We carefully carried them one by one and took them into the car while they were sound asleep.

We got to the daycare and put the characters in the cot so they could sleep but all the other characters were playing with noisy fire trucks. We didn't want the other characters from the book to wake up, so we moved the cots to a quiet colourful room. We set them down into one cot because they were so tiny.

We dropped down on the floor and took a rest next to the cot where the characters were asleep. We thought that we were free for a bit but knew there was more chaos to come, especially because we now had another book of characters with us. We knew that it was time to take a rest before another day of work.
