It was a boring day in Naomi's high school, sitting in third period learning about biology wasn't her ideal preference ~~for~~ on what to do that afternoon. Fortunately or unfortunately, Naomi was a rebel. She was a teenage girl with cascading brunette curls, hazel eyes and tan skin with freckles that stood out on her radiant face. Naomi would chew bubblegum every class, get detention at least twice a day, ~~and~~ put her feet up on her desk right in front of her professors and never follow the school dress code. One day, Naomi was headed to her locker when she saw a majestic colourful light shining from the janitor's closet. Without even thinking, Naomi went in and suddenly got whisked up into a magical island full of extraordinary creatures and bizzare flora. Naomi had no idea what or why or how or where she was and how ~~she~~ she got here in the first place, but she didn't care, she thought it was much better than biology.

INNER WEST

Out of nowhere a massive scarlet dragon appeared in front of her.

"You must find the dragon egg and return it to the nest or else you shall never leave Malmoc's Island, ~~Am~~ I clear?" - deeply explained the dragon.

Naomi was lost, she didn't understand anything about this weird mysterious adventure, for all she new, she had to find the missing dragon egg and ~~a~~ return it. The teenager started searching everywhere, under rocks, up in trees, she even found Snow White and asked her, but still nothing. That was when the girl noticed something shimmering at the top of Starry Village Mountain.

Naomi wasn't certain that it was the egg, but it was worth a shot to get back home. She spent hours climbing and became completely exhausted. When Naomi reached the top she saw the same majestic colourful light that was in the janitor's closet back at school, it was the dragon egg. The girl was so relieved she found it and rushed down to return it to the nest. From that day on, Naomi paid attention in class knowing that learning is much more fun than anything, it sparks with creativity, gives knowledge and builds imagination. She made sure not to go in the janitor's room ever again. The End
